The Illinois Judicial Conference Symposium

Each year, the Loyola University Chicago Law Journal publishes the Illinois Judicial Conference Symposium Issue. This entire issue is devoted to topics relating to Illinois law and the Illinois judiciary. Our aim is to provide Illinois judges, practitioners, and scholars with a valuable source of information concerning significant trends in Illinois law.

This year, the Law Journal is pleased to publish an article from a practitioner and a professor from Illinois. Included is an article on oppression of minority shareholders in closely held corporations and an article on the new Illinois rules governing extrajudicial speech. In addition, the issue contains two student comments on Illinois law. One discusses a bill proposed in the Illinois General Assembly to allow physicians to engage in collective bargaining. The second comment discusses new solutions to the problems posed by juvenile confessions.

The Illinois Judicial Conference Symposium Issue will continue the Law Journal's tradition to publish both an academic and practical resource for the Illinois legal community.
