Antitrust Enforcement Encourages
Health Care Providers To Cooperate Procompetitively DAVID MARX, JR. 1
CHRISTOPHER M. MURPHY

A review of significant administrative and judicial rulings in antitrust law during 1993 shows that the antitrust laws should not impede innovative, cost-cutting cooperative arrangements among providers, so long as their actual or potential procompetitive benefits are not outweighed by their anticompetitive effects.

Medicare and GAAP: Understanding the Decision of the Sixth Circuit in Guernsey Memorial Hospital v. Secretary of Health and Human Services ROBERT L. ROTH 29

The Medicare Act entitles qualified providers to reimbursement for the "reasonable cost" of furnishing hospital services to Medicare beneficiaries. The Sixth Circuit's decision in Guernsey Memorial Hospital demonstrates the tension between generally accepted accounting principles and Medicare reimbursement principles.

Medicare and Medicaid False Claims:
Prohibitions and Sanctions TIMOTHY STOLTZFUS JOST 41

Both state and federal agencies are cracking down on health care professionals who file false Medicare claims, but physicians who make good faith attempts to comply with the law are fairly secure from prosecution, since both criminal and civil penalties must be based on willful or knowing breaches of the law.

Judicial Review of Medicaid Hospital and Nursing Home Reimbursement Methodologies Under the Boren Amendment JOHN M. BURMAN 55

Congress passed the Boren Amendment to allow states to develop and implement alternative reimbursement methodologies that promote the efficient and economical delivery of hospital and nursing facility services. However, courts have interpreted Boren in ways that limit state discretion and impede their ability to meet budgetary constraints.

The Case for Physician Direction
in Health Plans EDWARD HIRSHFELD 81

Advanced managed care organizations limit costs by having nonphysician managers make medical management decisions. Physicians should be included on the board of medical managers to assure that the patients' best interests are considered when management decisions are made.
