Matthew Sag

Founded in 1994, the Institute for Consumer Antitrust Studies is a non-partisan, independent, academic center designed to explore the impact of antitrust and consumer protection law and enforcement on the tangible interests of the individual consumer. The Institute is the only academic organization of its kind in the U.S. that brings together competition and consumer law and policy in an integrated manner. Our mission is to promote a more competitive consumer friendly economy. The Institute promotes a comprehensive, inclusive view of the benefits of competition and consumer law and policy that reaches beyond prevailing narrow notions of economic efficiency. A vital part of Loyola University Chicago School of Law, the Institute fulfills its mission by sponsoring a rich JD and graduate legal curriculum, student and senior fellowships, research, publication, conferences, symposia, fellowships, and other programs in Chicago, throughout the U.S., and around the world.
