DEAN WILLIAM L. LAMEY

DEDICATION

It seems appropriate that this publication, the inaugural issue of the Loyola Law Journal, be dedicated to a man who has been one of the moving forces which have led to the creation of the Journal, Dean William L. Lamey. Dean Lamey's relatively short tenure has been marked by numerous achievements, in addition to the publication of the Loyola Law Journal, which are notable for their contribution to the overall development of the law school. His recent resignation as Dean, which will become effective after completion of the current academic year, will deprive the law school of an extremely effective and capable administrator. However, in returning to the position he had so ably filled for more than two decades, that of a full time professor of law, it seems certain that his future contributions to the law school and its students will be of undiminishing quality. It is in recognition of these past and future contributions to the welfare of the law school and its students that the editors and staff of the Loyola Law Journal dedicate their efforts in the publication of this issue to Dean William L. Lamey of the Loyola University School of Law.
